The Cisco IOS QoS software enables complex networks to control and predictably service a variety of networked applications and traffic types. Almost any network can take advantage of QoS for optimum efficiency, whether it is a small corporate network, an Internet service provider, or an enterprise network.

Enhanced Interior Gateway Routing Protocol (EIGRP) is an advanced distance-vector routing protocol that is used on a computer network for automating routing decisions and configuration. The protocol was designed by Cisco Systems as a proprietary protocol, available only on Cisco routers. Partial functionality of EIGRP was converted to an open standard in 2013 and was published with ...

A virtual private network (VPN) extends a private network across a public network, and enables users to send and receive data across shared or public networks as if their computing devices were directly connected to the private network. Applications running across a VPN may therefore benefit from the functionality, security, and management of the private network.

In Figure 1, a network layer firewall called a "screened host firewall" is represented. In a screened host firewall, access to and from a single host is controlled by means of a router operating at a network layer. The single host is a bastion host; a highly-defended and secured strong-point that (hopefully) can resist attack.

EIGRP (Enhanced Interior Gateway Routing Protocol) is a link-state routing protocol that uses DUAL (Distributed Algorithm) to calculate the best path to each destination. It is a classful protocol, meaning it does not support VLSM (Variable Length Subnet Masking). EIGRP uses a composite metric consisting of bandwidth, delay, and reliability to determine the best path. It is a hybrid protocol, combining features of both distance-vector and link-state protocols.
